Association of College and University Educators

In collaboration with

The key to student success? Great teaching.

The call is unequivocal. We must—and can—graduate more students prepared for rewarding careers, engaged citizenship, and purposeful lives.

Faculty members have a singular impact. Together with ACUE, colleges and universities are providing their educators with comprehensive support and their students with an extraordinary education.

Courses

ACUE's courses prepare faculty in the teaching essentials that improve student achievement. Courses are offered online, certified by Quality Matters, and equivalent to three hours of graduate credit. Faculty work together in cohorts and receive expert facilitation.

Faculty learn about and implement practices that address:

- Foundations of effective instruction
- Online teaching essentials
- Career readiness and 21st-century skills
- Civic and service learning
- Inclusive learning environments
- Course and class design
- Active learning techniques
- Higher order thinking and learning
- Formative and summative assessment

Credentials

ACUE's certificates are awarded in collaboration with the American Council on Education (ACE) to faculty who demonstrate a commitment to excellence in teaching.

Community

Teaching is both a science and an art. Members of ACUE's Community of Professional Practice receive information and ongoing support to refine their craft and stay current on research.
