

Interview Questions for Course-Takers

1. What type of formal preparation in pedagogy did you have prior to earning your ACUE credential? How has your preparedness and/or confidence changed since earning your credential?
2. Tell me about one evidence-based technique you implemented in your class while completing ACUE's course. How did it impact student engagement and learning?
3. Which module impacted your teaching practice or the way you think about student engagement most, and why?
4. How did the community/cohort-based format impact your learning and engagement with others on your campus/in different disciplines?
5. What does the ACUE credential signify to you personally? What does the ACUE credential signify to your department, to your institution, and, more broadly, to the higher ed community?
6. What does your institution's investment in the program indicate about the value they place on teaching, on faculty, and on students?
7. What steps will you take to continue learning about and implementing evidence-based teaching practices?
8. Would you recommend the program to others? Why?

Interview Questions for Administrators

1. How does the partnership with ACUE connect to your institution's strategic plan, student success initiatives, or mission statement?
2. What does your institution's investment in the partnership with ACUE indicate about the value you place on teaching, on faculty, and on students?
3. Why is formal preparation in pedagogy important to you and to your institution?
4. How do you expect students will benefit from faculty's participation?
5. If applicable, what are some of the early findings in terms of faculty engagement and student impact?
6. How does the partnership help promote a culture of teaching and learning?

Interview Questions for Students of ACUE Faculty

1. You may know that your instructor is taking a course in evidence-based teaching practices. What new teaching practices have you observed your instructor using in the classroom?

2. How did your instructor's use of these techniques impact the classroom and your learning experience?
3. What does your institution's investment in supporting faculty demonstrate about the value they place on ensuring students have powerful learning experiences in their classes?